"I don't mind coming to the doctor, but filling out this paperwork certainly isn't my favorite.

Alright...let's see here...general information. So far so good. My Kindergarten memorizing skills are certainly coming in handy here! Height, weight, male, single...last physical was for sports...so it was in May...May 12th. Thank goodness for my phone calendar.

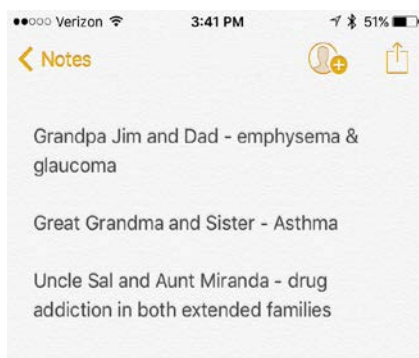

Doctor is Dr. Sands. Glad I added the office number to my contacts. Makes my life a whole lot easier.

Phone number again. Good thing Kindergarten had me memorize my Mom's information too! No second parent contact...two sisters, Evelyn is 10 and Jackie is 17. And I'll use Mom as my emergency contact.

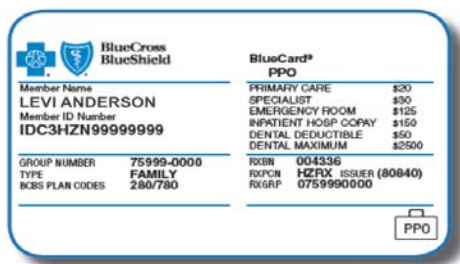

Hmm...the questions you don't want your parents to know the answers to. No smoking, alcohol haha...just on the weekends...so I guess once a week. Caffeine isn't really my thing...and neither is exercise really. Do video games on the TV count as TV time...I'll just put it on there. Haha...those video games tend to creep into sleep time...so maybe five hours a night. No other sleeping problems besides I don't really get enough.

What counts as a serious illness or injury? I have no idea...does my sinus infection from last month count? Surgeries...I don't know...no medications...allergies...I have never been tested...I have no clue how to fill this out!!

Okay...maybe the next page will be better. Ah...family history. Mom said I might need this today.

I think I'm almost done. Last page...insurance card. I could have sworn I put it in my wallet.

What is a gua-ran-tor? I definitely don't have a spouse...I guess my Mom is the guarantor since it is her insurance. Good thing most of this is on the card. I would never know how to fill this out. Mom didn't give me another card, so my educated guess is we don't have a secondary insurance...

No more papers? Finally!"
