"This clipboard of papers is ridiculous! I can't believe I have to fill all of this out! At least it's a lot of it is easy stuff.

Obviously I can handle writing my name and I have had my address and phone number memorized since Kindergarten! Race...check. I was just recently at the DMV getting my license, so I will use the same height and weight that I used on the paperwork there.

I'm definitely not married and I was just at the doctors for my physical on the 27th. I remember because that was my friend Kara's birthday. Shoot...what was the doctor's name again? I don't go too often, but I guess I should know that. They expect me to have the phone number for the doctor too?!

They want my phone number again? I just wrote that down in the first section. I've got mom and dad's information down by heart. How old is my "charming" younger sister again...she was born in December of 2010...so that would make her 5. Mom and Dad work a lot, so I am not sure they are the best emergency contacts since they are really busy. Maybe I'll put my girlfriend down for this. She always has her phone on her, she is reliable, and she drives...although...if things don't work out, I'm not sure I want her coming in an emergency! I guess I will just put my Mom down then. I know she would drop what she is doing to help me if it was an emergency.

Ah, next page out of what feels like ten thousand! Nope, nope, coffee from my Keurig is my favorite...I usually am on my second cup by the time I get to school in the morning. I don't do too much exercise...so I'll guess three days a week on average. Does Netflix count as TV? I guess quite a few hours. I need more of that sleep...I wish there were more hours in a day so I could get more! Once I hit the pillow I am definitely out.

Moving on to the next section. I haven't had any major illnesses, but I did have a concussion last year. Nope, no surgeries. No medications. I do have a bee sting allergy. The last time I got stung was on my foot and it swelled up so much I couldn't get my shoe on!

And, next page, family history. That's easy. Lucky for me my family is pretty healthy. No, no, no, no, no, no, no, no, no, no, type two diabetes on my mom's side, no, no, no, no, no, no, and no the rest of the way down.

I've got my insurance card in my wallet - makes my life ten times easier when I am trying to fill all this paperwork out. Hmm...even though my name is on the card, I think I have to put my mom's name for the guarantor because it's her insurance. Nope, no secondary insurance.

Double check...did I get everything? Whew - finally done."
